Teen age band a winner again in Colgate Country Showdown

Lindsey Caudill and the Lighted Palm Band travel to Columbus, Ohio, Labor Day weekend to compete in another round of the Colgate Country Showdown.

Caudill, and the band won the Ashland Region at the Lawrence County Fair in Lawrence County, Ohio, and will go on to Six Flags Wyandotte Lake, Columbus, Ohio, this Sunday representing Radio Station WTCR in the Tri-State area.

If the group wins the competition in Columbus they will win $1,000.00 and become eligible to compete in the Wheeling, W. Va., state event October 8, where the winners will travel to Disney World, Orlando, Florida, to compete in the finals for $100,000.00, a recording contract, and an appearance on TV.

Lindsey and the band have been featured in several venues, including Summer Motion in Ashland, Pullman Square and Ritter Park in Huntington, W. Va., Old Mill Park and the Kiwanis Club Pool Party in West Liberty. They have dates scheduled for the West Liberty Sorghum festival and Ashland's Poage Landing Festival, where they will open for country talents Little Big Town and Andy Griggs.

Caudill said she feels confident with the band, and feels that they have contributed to her success as a vocalist. Joe Caudill, Lindsey's father and band manager, says that working with the band has been a rewarding challenge. "They are not just the average 'garage band'," Caudill said. "They really have their act together and the sky is the limit for them."

New UNITE voucher program to help addicts get treatment

A new $1.6 million initiative to help low-income drug addicts in the Fifth Congressional District receive treatment was unveiled last month by U.S. Congressman Harold "Hal" Rogers.

Operation UNITE's Treatment Voucher Program will pay up to $3,000 for short-term (up to 30 days) or $5,000 for long-term (more than 30 days) residential treatment for adults. The amount increases to $6,000 short-term or $10,000 long-term for juveniles.

More than 300 addicts will be able to benefit from the program, Rogers announced.

"However, he addict must be serious about getting help," Rogers stressed. "Most importantly, he or she must take responsibility and do their part. This program is available to an individual one time only. We're willing to reach out, if they are willing to accept responsibility for their own well-being."

Representatives from the 29 counties served by UNITE, government officials and treatment providers from across the region attended the press conference held at the London-Laurel County Tourist Commission office.

"If you need to know why (a voucher program is needed) look at your local newspaper or TV or radio station, said Sharon Tharp coordinator of the Morgan County UNITE Coalition. "Look at the number of overdose deaths, at things like divorce, domestic violence, suicide and homicide. A lot of people that do these things do it under the influence of drugs or alcohol."

Tharp said that if "properly done, treatment works.

Children, adolescent health at fore of community discussions

By Laura Hall

No matter how people in Morgan County think health should be improved, they agree on one thing: changes need to occur for the sake of local children and youth.

Although there are differing ideas, opinions, and suggestions for how to make Morgan County residents healthier, there is consensus in the community that the health status of children must improve if Morgan County and its residents are going to thrive in the future. Forum participants varied on where these changes should begin but agreed that a change must take place for the youth to succeed and Morgan County to prosper.

At local health forums, participants could not always give particular strategies or examples on how to improve the health of adults in Morgan County. But when asked about improving the health of kids, most participants had a vision or idea of which changes would be beneficial. Participants shared personal stories about poor health affecting children's emotional and physical well-being, insightful reasons why local youth need to eat better and exercise more, and creative ideas on how the community can make the necessary changes. There was an outpouring of options to address the poor eating habits and lack of physical activity that impact children in the community.

Numerous stories were shared that highlight the breakdown of children's health and well-being. One early childhood education worker discussed efforts to increase physical activity in her class. She stated, "Reintroducing physical activity does not equal change in behaviors. We have three year olds that go sit in the shade as soon as we go outside to play. We have time set aside for activities but the kids do not use it." A retired schoolteacher at another forum emphasized this point by stating, "Kids don't even play outside anymore. Kids probably don't know what a mud pie is."

One gentlemen at a forum reminisced about community work he did as a college student in the 1960s. He shared, "I got paid to go pick up kids in the hollers and drive them to town for summer programs. Everyday in the summer I would pick up the kids who wanted to come to town for organized activities. They could spend all day with other kids having fun. I don't know how much this program cost but it seemed worth it to the kids. I imagine that there would be long lasting impressions on the kids who participate."

He followed up this statement with the suggestion that a parks and recreation department supported by taxes as well as participation fees could help fund activities such as these. Collective activities, such as the program this participant described, are just one example of the ideas shared for encouraging local youth to get active.

In many forums, the conversations also highlighted youth activities, especially sports, which are already available in town. When the question was presented at one forum, "What keeps people from tapping into these activities that are already present in Morgan County?" participants stated that TV, computers, and video games keep youth isolated and inactive. One parent with teenagers stated, "Parents need to turn off the TV and get outside with their kids. The TV

Board rejects bids for new elementary school

The Morgan County Board of Education has rejected bids submitted for construction of a proposed new elementary school near Greear and has authorized the district's architect to come up with revised plans to reduce construction costs.

Superintendent of Schools Joe Dan Gold said the two lowest bids — submitted by Alliance Contracting, Inc., of Glasgow and D. W. Wilburn, Inc., of Lexington — each exceeded the board's projected costs of around $8,250,000.

Gold said the board hopes to avoid reducing the planned size of the new school through the use of less expensive building materials, etc.

The board will consider the architect's revisions at a special board meeting on Sept. 8 and proceed to seek new bids.

The new building will replace the WPA-built school at Cannel City.

The higher-than-expected bid proposals that were received would adversely affect the district's bonding capacity and jeopardize the board's plans to build another new building to replace the WPA-built Wrigley Elementary.

Gold said the board must proceed with construction of the new school at Greear as scheduled or risk losing $4.5 million in Urgent Need Funds approved by the legislature last year to help school districts replace dilapidated buildings.

"We have to go ahead with construction to utilize the Urgent Need Fund money, which must be used before the end of the fiscal year," Gold said.

The base bids submitted by the low bidders at a special meeting

West Liberty Christian Church plans for changes

The West Liberty Christian Church regretfully accepted the resignation of Ben Thomas, Youth Minister. Ben advised the congregation that he has accepted a position of youth minister at First Christian Church, Baldwyn, Mississippi. Ben's father, Tom, was the previous Senior Minister at the Christian Church and now serves as Senior Minister of the First Christian Church in Baldwyn. Ben and his wife, Tamara, will be greatly missed. Their ministry has played an instrumental role in the growth of the youth programs. Senior Minister, Paul Casteel, and advisors are immediately pursuing candidates for a full time youth minister.

All youth programs will continue at West Liberty Christian Church. Beginning with a Fireproof tailgate party Friday, Sept. 2, at 6 p.m. This is before the first home football game. Brother Paul will be grilling burgers and dogs. We invite the community to this free event. The YADAS (Young Adult Devotion and Support), a young adults ministry of the church, will host the event.

This fall beginning Sept. 7, Wednesday night classes will resume. To become more effective in connecting people to Jesus, some changes in class structure are being planned. Given our space issues and growing number of attendees, especially in our middle and high school classes, Fireproof will meet at the Community Center gymnasium. The time will also change. Fireproof will now meet from 7 p.m. till 8:30 p.m. Fireproof is a worship service for middle school and high school students. Games, music, snacks, lesson time prayer, laughter, and good ole Christian fellowship are all part of Fireproof.

Wednesday night classes will also resume for students, preschool thru 5th grade. These classes will meet each Wednesday evening from 7 p.m. till 8 p.m. If you are the parent of a preschooler, we are making plans to have a preschool nursery on Wednesdays.

We also invite you to our ongoing Adult Bible Study with Dr. Kent Nickell in the conference room at 7 p.m. There is something for everyone from childhood to seniors at West Liberty Christian Church! At WLCC we're about discovering Jesus and making Him real in our lives. Our vision is to help people believe in a God who loves them, to belong to and authentic community (one that you would consider family) and finally, to become all God wants you to be.

If you would like more information on West Liberty Christian Church you can visit the church website on the internet at www.westlibertychristian.com, or email at wlccoffice@yahoo.com, or call the church office at (606) 743-4356.

Opening Ky.'s juvenile courts benefits everyone

By Irv Maze
Jefferson County Attorney

Our community has been touched recently by several tragic and near-tragic crimes committed by juveniles. Unfortunately, many more potentially tragic juvenile cases lurk hidden in the court system. Under current Kentucky law, you cannot learn about them from officers of the court most familiar with these cases, and you cannot observe how the judges, prosecutors and other officials attempt to preserve public safety while attempting to rehabilitate juveniles found guilty of these crimes. Because of these recent cases, and the hundreds more you have not heard about, the cloak of confidentiality must be lifted from Kentucky juvenile courts. Opening Kentucky juvenile courts to some degree of public scrutiny will benefit the court, the accused, and the public.

Since the beginning of the 20th Century, juvenile court advocates have debated whether the proceedings of such courts should be open to public scrutiny. As recently as the 1970s, the trend has been to maintain the confidentiality of the proceedings, citing as reasons the rehabilitative purpose of juvenile court and the need to avoid stigmatizing juvenile offenders.

However, over the course of the last century, and most dramatically the last two decades, the social environment has changed significantly, with sharp increases in young perpetrators committing the same crimes as adults. In response, many states have modified their juvenile confidentiality statutes to provide differing degrees of public access. Most states no longer have a complete prohibition against public and media access to juvenile proceedings. Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Utah and Virginia allow public access to juvenile court proceedings if the offense would constitute a felony if committed by an adult. Florida extends this principle one step further, and allows the name, photograph and address of a child charged with an offense that would constitute a felony or three or more misdemeanors to be public.

Advocates of closed juvenile courts are concerned that public scrutiny would traumatize and stigmatize children and families, provide a permanent record of a single youthful mistake, and hinder the rehabilitative role traditionally taken by the court. These are valid concerns that should be considered seriously when discussing legislative changes to the current law, particularly regarding issues not related to criminal activity, such as dependency, neglect, and out of control petitions.

Currently, Jefferson Juvenile Court takes these factors into consideration when determining a legal solution for a juvenile in its charge. First-time offenders accused of committing non-violent crimes are regularly placed with Kentucky Court Designated Workers for counseling and other services designed to provide corrective action without a court hearing. These are cases most people identify as classic delinquency issues.

In reality, juveniles are more and more commonly using guns and other weapons to commit murder, rape, assault, and robbery, as well as drug trafficking. Assaults in schools alone have doubled in the past decade. In Jefferson Juvenile Court, there were 1,382 juvenile violent crime offenses in 1993. By 2003, that number had grown to 2,525. In 2002, of 305 juveniles eligible to be waived from confidential juvenile court to public circuit court, 35 were so indicted. In 2003, 36 of 277 were waived to circuit court.

So the majority of juvenile offenders remain behind the closed doors of juvenile court. Many are repeat or multiple offenders, with lengthy juvenile histories at fourteen and fifteen years of age. These individuals have proven themselves a threat to community. And it is these cases which need to be made public, to allow the most information available to the court in making its decision, to insure accountability of judges, prosecutors and law enforcement, and to alert the community to the presence of juveniles who commit violent crimes.

Kentucky's Juvenile Court confidentiality statute has a consequence not envisioned by its framers. In three unrelated cases within the past year, information on juvenile court cases has been obtained by the media through families of defendants. The information the public received on each case contained significant factual errors or omissions. Because of current Kentucky law, as the prosecutor, I could not correct this misinformation without committing a misdemeanor. I am bound to uphold and abide by the law, whether or not I agree with it.

Some would argue that this is an urban issue. I disagree. I grew up on a farm, in a rural community. A variety of influences have changed forever that community. My colleagues throughout Kentucky report similar transformations in their counties. The problems are just as real, and the need for more information just as pressing, as in metropolitan areas of the Commonwealth.

Kentucky courts, interpreting the current law, have steadfastly upheld the confidentiality of juvenile court proceedings. Legislative change, then, is the only path to reconcile the state's position with the reality of current juvenile crime statistics. The choice Kentucky has now is whether it will be among the last to open its juvenile courts, or to do so now. Our community deserves to know how the justice system deals with violent crimes, even when committed by juvenile. As we have seen, they affect us all.

CKBC blood drive scheduled Sept. 8 at Community Center

Want a shocker? Did you know that 300 pints of blood must be donated every single day of the year in central and eastern Kentucky? That is how much blood is needed at 67 hospitals and clinics in this half of the state.

Morgan County Community wants you to know that the blood you donate here stays here, helping a fellow Kentuckian through a trauma, an accident, surgery, cancer treatment, burn recovery and more.

Central Kentucky Blood Center will hold a blood drive at Morgan County on Thursday, Sept. 8, from noon - 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center. The event is sponsored by the Morgan County Lions Club and refreshments will be provided by the West Liberty Homemakers. Save three lives at the blood drive and register to win a trip to Orlando, including air fare, hotel and passes to Universal Studios Orlando.

You do not have to be super human to donate blood - just be over 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in general good health. You can be in and out in about an hour, and you can donate every 56 days.

Help save a life. CKBC will even give you a free snack, drink and T-shirt, but more importantly, we will give you a great feeling.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES

by Joe Nickell

GHOSTLORE I: The Headless Ghost of McClannahan Hill.
In the popular imagination ghosts are a form of "energy" that survives death - a possibility not supported by science. Yet ghosts are invariably portrayed as wearing the clothing, uniforms or costumes of their era, even though articles of dress are inanimate objects - an obvious contradiction.

Moreover, the science of physiology has established the simple fact that once the brain has been destroyed, brain function ceases, and so, too, surely ends the ability to think and move. Science therefore considers ghosts - alleged spirits of the dead who yet supposedly speak and walk about - to be figments of the imagination. Doubly unlikely, it would seem, are headless ghosts, whose existence utterly defy logic.

Nevertheless, storytellers have produced many colorful examples, notably Washington Irving's 1819 "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," which tells how schoolmaster Icabod Crane is frightened out of town by his rival, masquerading as a headless horseman. In contrast, many headless-ghost tales are told as true - or ostensibly so, for the teller's tongue may occasionally seem to stray into his cheek.

In the mountains of eastern Kentucky, there are many such folk narratives, including an interesting one I learned growing up in Morgan County. It concerns a Civil War skirmish that occurred on McClannahan Hill (approximately four miles northwest of the county seat of West Liberty, my hometown).

The story begins on Oct. 6, 1863, when some Union soldiers (from Company B, Fifth Ohio Independent Calvary Battalion) had passed through West Liberty en route to Morehead. Rebel Captain John T. Williams was able to cut across the river and reach McClannahan Hill ahead of them. He and his band waylaid the Federals, firing upon them from behind fallen trees.

Reportedly, one soldier was killed and a few others were wounded. (One of those was taken to the home of my great-great-grandfather, Milton B. Cox, himself then a second lieutenant serving in the Confederacy. There, the Cox family, in one of the common acts of war, nursed the enemy soldier back to health.) Over time, the superstitious Appalachian folk yielded up a talk about the ambush.

"Some still say that a man with no head has been seen walking around on top of the hill there," my old school teacher Arthur Johnson wrote. "It is believed that this is a ghost of the Union soldier who was killed there."

Well, so "it is believed." But I recall once mentioning the tale to my father, the late J. Wendell Nickell, who had come to own the woodland property in question. A skeptic about such things, he retorted that in all his time on the site, he had never once seen the headless ghost of McClannahan Hill.

How the man supposedly lost his head is not explained. That he did is, in fact, doubtful, because - almost certainly - the ambushing rebels were without cannon; neither is there any other suggestion from the historical record of any beheading having taken place by that or any other means during the skirmish.

Therefore, I suspect we do not have the wandering ghost of a headless soldier, but rather the wandering motif (or story element) of a headless ghost that travels from region to region and tale to tale via the process known as folklore.

Such a narrative can take many forms, like the following example of what we might call "jokelore." It was related by the late Kentucky writer Joe Creason (1972, 217):

"Two boys in eastern Kentucky were discussing their town ghost. Just the night before, one vowed, he was walking past the haunted house when the ghost, head conveniently tucked under arm, floated out a window toward him.

"What was that ol' ghost doin' the last time you saw him?" the other kid asked breathlessly.

"Son," came the logical answer. "He was fallin' behind, fallin' behind!"

THIS COULD BE YOU

Listening to the rain makes me sad. Let there be a bit of sunshine to make me glad. Dark days seem like one long, lonely night. Thank God for the bright, blue that make things right. There's a time to cry and say goodbye. yesterday's memories will take away a sigh. Teardrops, like rain, fall from my eyes for all the tears I've shed there should be a prize. Someday I will find a garden along the way. Ten like a child again I will run and play. I'll gather a big bouquet of flowers. Then it won't matter if there are a few showers. Hope for the future and all of my tomorrows will wipe away my tears, and ease all of my sorrows.

Howerton name
deputy warden
at prison here

FRANKFORT — Kentucky Department of Corrections Deputy Commissioner George Million announced Tuesday that Robert (Rob) W. Howerton has been appointed Deputy Warden of the Eastern Kentucky Correctional Complex in West Liberty.
Million said Howerton, who began his career in corrections as a correctional officer in 1987 in Indiana, brings a wealth of skills and knowledge to the position.
Howerton served first as a correctional officer at the Vanderburgh Community Corrections Complex in Evansville, Ind. He later was promoted to sergeant in 1991 while serving at the Branchville Correctional Facility and was subsequently promoted to correctional release coordinator in 1993, to unit manager II in 1998, and assistant superintendent in 2003.
As assistant superintendent, he managed all department heads in the facility program areas (food service, medical/social services, recreation, education, community services, public information, policy and accreditation) and assisted the superintendent in all facility decisions.
"Mr. Howerton brings with him a wide spectrum of knowledge and experience," Million said. "Throughout his career in corrections, he has specialized in the area of tactical training, K-9 handling, been an active member of the Emergency Squad, a firefighter, and was an ERO member from 1989 to 1998."

Howerton has also served as DOC hostage negotiator, a situation control team leader for seven years, he is a certified fire-arms/chemical agent instructor, and a trained public information officer. Additionally, he is a certified consultant/auditor consultant for the American Correctional Association.
Howerton is a graduate of Indiana University with a concentration in social sciences and a minor in sociology.
"I believe Howerton will prove to be a valuable member of Kentucky's correctional management team, Million said.

WATER AND ELECTRICITY: A DEADLY COMBINATION

It's shocking! When water and electricity get together, they cause trouble.
Using electrical appliances properly in the bathroom or wherever water is present can be a matter of life and death. Keep these tips in mind:

- Power is still present even when an appliance is off. If an appliance falls in water, unplug it – don't grab it.
- Don't touch faucets or stand on a damp floor while using an appliance or electrical switch. Dry your hands before plugging anything in.
- Keep appliances away from sinks or tubs where they can accidentally fall in. Cords should never trail in water.

Water and electricity are necessary to running your household. Just keep them apart.

Chemical-weapons monitoring flawed, Depot employee says

An employee at the Blue Grass Army Depot, an Army chemical weapons facility in Madison County, has alleged his post failed to properly monitor deadly nerve gas for months, and took punitive action against him when he complained.

The commander (of the facility) would not comment on the allegations, but said the toxin is secure and his employees well cared for.

"In a sworn affidavit, Donald Van Winkle, who operates air-monitoring units at the Richmond facility, charged [the] monitors [used] to ensure ... VX nerve toxin [doesn't] leak were incorrectly configured, threatening the lives of employees," according to a story by Jonathan M. Katz of The Associated Press.

Lt. Cmdr. Joe Carpenter, a Pentagon spokesman, told Katz, "They're serious allegations and based on information that's received they'll be looked into."

About 520 tons of chemical warfare agents are stored at the Madison County depot. The Defense Department has slated the weapons for destruction.

Junction News

By Kathy Bolin
Aug. 29--Greetings from the Junction.
How is everyone doing this week? Hopefully well rested and ready to tackle the world.
I suppose by now that most of the county has heard about the accident that Beverly Cantrell was in last week. Beverly is the wife of Johnny Cantrell and neighbors of mine that live up in Lick Branch. Beverly was on her way to work Friday morning when the truck she was driving dropped off the side of the road and then came back onto the blacktop across the road and over a small hill at the Scotty Williams place and into his barn. Beverly is down at UK Hospital with a broken leg and arm and facial abrasions. She is expected to be home later this week.
Herbert Wright will be going to Cardinal Hill for rehabilitation on his leg as soon as they have a bed open up. Herbert has had a difficult time the last few months since he broke his leg. Hopefully soon he will have all of this behind him.

I saw Jennifer Wright down at Ison's store today and she told me that we had a birthday boy in our neighborhood. Edison Pack turned "77", family gathered on Sunday for a cookout to help him celebrate. Happy birthday, Edison!
Hnery and Chassie Bailey have a new member in their home. Grandson Kyle Bailey will be staying with grandma and grandpa this school year. William E. used to call Kyle "Pasadumbroski", whatever that might have meant, I have no idea.
Well, I'm going to close, but first I would like to say "Hi" to Buford Blevins, way down in Tennessee. Buford introduced himself to me at the Wright reunion, and is a faithful reader of my article. He especially likes my horse adventures.

Total Mismatch? Hope Not

A new $1.6 million initiative to help low-income drug addicts in the Fifth Congressional District receive treatment was unveiled last month by U.S. Congressman Harold "Hal" Rogers.

Operation UNITE's Treatment Voucher Program will pay up to $3,000 for short-term (up to 30 days) or $5,000 for long-term (more than 30 days) residential treatment for adults. The amount increases to $6,000 short-term or $10,000 long-term for juveniles.

More than 300 addicts will be able to benefit from the program, Rogers announced.

"However, he addict must be serious about getting help," Rogers stressed. "Most importantly, he or she must take responsibility and do their part. This program is available to an individual one time only. We're willing to reach out, if they are willing to accept responsibility for their own well-being."

Representatives from the 29 counties served by UNITE, government officials and treatment providers from across the region attended the press conference held at the London-Laurel County Tourist Commission office.

"If you need to know why (a voucher program is needed) look at your local newspaper or TV or radio station, said Sharon Tharp coordinator of the Morgan County UNITE Coalition. "Look at the number of overdose deaths, at things like divorce, domestic violence, suicide and homicide. A lot of people that do these things do it under the influence of drugs or alcohol."

Tharp said that if "properly done, treatment works.

Operation UNITE operates a treatment hotline (1-866-908-6483) where families in crisis can call to receive help. Time and again in the past, Rogers said, addicts called the hotline only to find out they needed financial assistance before entering treatment.

Operation UNITE has entered

Lady Cougars win over Fleming Co., West Carter

In recent action, the MCHS Lady Cougars volleyball team posted wins over Fleming County and West Carter.

After a slow start against Fleming, the Lady Cougars took the first set, 25-22 after Courtney Lacy put the team back in "team mode" by serving up seven straight points with three aces.

"In the second set, Morgan de-into contracts with several facilities that have dedicated treatment space for the program, but voucher recipients may choose to receive help from any facility.

To qualify for a voucher, Tharp said, an applicant must:

- Verify they have lived in the Fifth District for at least six months.
- Have an income that does not exceed 60 percent of the current HUD median income guidelines for the county in which they reside.
- Complete an assessment screening.

"It's no secret we have an epidemic facing our region. This is the most devastating scourge I've seen in my 25 years in Congress," Rogers said.

"Drugs are tearing families apart, ruining lives, and stretching the resources of law enforcement and social service agencies to the absolute limit," Rogers said.

The voucher program will not end the problem, but it is another tool to help people in the battle," he said.

Cougars to host Bath County in home opener Friday evening

Coach Randy Wood is encouraging fans to fill the bleachers

By David Patrick

For Morgan County, this season's six-game home schedule will get underway tomorrow night at Herdman Field when the Cougars play host to Bath County. Last year's 52-0 shutout of the Wildcats in Owingsville was Morgans most lopsided victory of the season. But, Cougar Coach Randy Wood says it's a new season and the Wildcats have shown improvement from a year ago.

"Bath County is a better team this time around," said Wood. "They have improved and you can tell that by looking at the scores. Even though they've lost both of their games so far, they did win two pre-season scrimmages. Some coaches may take teams like that for granted, but I don't. We need to come out ready to play."

Bath opened the season with a 32-6 home loss to West Carter. Last week, the Wildcats were taken to the woodshed again—suffering a 28-point blowout at the hands of Lewis County.

"They're pretty much a running team, with a little play action mixed in," Wood said as he described Bath's offensive set. "Bath has a decent sized line and have a couple of kids who hit the hole real hard."

As for the Cougars, they're more than ready to hit the field again. After the 20-14 victory over Rowan to open the season, Morgan had last Friday night off due to the open week. So did the open week help the team?

"No, not really," said Coach Randy Wood. "I don't think it really helped us, but then again, it didn't hurt us either," Wood said. "We really didn't get a whole lot accomplished other than rest and a couple of JV games. But, I think we're okay and ready for Friday."

The Cougars did add another player to their roster during the off-week. Wood says John Robert Henderson has been at practice and should be available for action next week.

"We're happy to see John Robert come out and we believe he can certainly help us," said Wood. "Because of KHSAA guidelines, he won't be able to play against Bath but should be ready to go at Mason County."

Henderson played football as a freshman and scored the Cougars' final points of the 2003 season with an electrifying 80-yard kickoff return against East Carter for a late fourth quarter touchdown. Even though that was the last time John Robert fielded a football in game action, the Cougar coaches are confident his athleticism and speed will have an immediate impact on the team.

And speaking of impact, Coach Randy Wood is encouraging a large turnout for Friday's home opener.

"With this being our first home game, I want to encourage fans to come out and support this team," Wood said. "We would like to see a big crowd there when the kids take the field."

As always, game time is slated for 7:30 at Herdman Field.

You cannot be fueled by bitterness. It can eat you up but it cannot drive you.

The Lady Cougars junior varsity also won, 21-14, 14-21, 15-9, with Alyssa Dulen and Meghan Howard dominating the net. A highlight was newcomer to the team, Brittany Salyer, who scored 9 points with her serves. Also serving notice of being a fine net player was Ashtyn Goforth.

Morgan completely controlled the game with West Carter, winning the first set, 25-6, during which Haley eagle had three kills, Courtney Lacy 4 kills, and 7 points on serves. Sam Jarvis spiked one and had one tip, Shandra Lewis came up with great digs and sets, Leslie Eagle had a kill and Alyssa Dulen and Meghan Howard each had a spike.

The Morgan County Chapter of the American Red Cross wishes to extend its thanks to Judge Executive Tim Conley and the Morgan County Fiscal Court for their support of the red cross. This retired ambulance was converted into a mobile red Cross unit to help with disaster relief. We feel Judge Conley and the court work very hard for all departments and Judge Conley is a true "Team Leader" and believes in "Team Spirit." Your Social Security

Protecting Your Social Security Number (SSN)

By Bernard O'Nan

The Social Security Number (SSN) is used to keep a record of a worker's earnings. Here are some things you can do to protect your number:

- Keep the number and card in a safe place to prevent theft — don't carry the card with you.
- Except for employers and financial institutions, which need them for tax reporting purposes, you are not required to give your Social Security number to private businesses. Giving the number is voluntary even when asked for the number directly. If requested, you should ask:
 - Why the number is needed.
 - How the number will be used.
 - What happens if they refuse.
 - What law requires them to give the number.

The answers to these questions can help you decide if you want to give out your SNN. The decision is yours. However, you should know that refusing to give the number might mean doing without the purchase or service for which the number was requested.

One way to find out whether someone is using your number to work is to check the Social Security Statement.

•Every worker age 25 and older and not already receiving Social Security benefits based on their own earnings will automatically receive a Social Security Statement each year, generally three months before their birthday. The statement will show the earnings reported to their SSN each year since 1951. If the information is incorrect, this could be an indication that someone is using their SSN.

•If they don't receive a statement, or wish to receive a statement sooner, they can request one:

- Online at www.socialsecurity.gov;
- By calling Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213; or

•At the local Social Security office. If you suspect someone is using your number, report this information to the Social Security Fraud Hotline by:

•Phone — 1-800-269-0271, or call the Ashland Social Security office, 606-324-0516.

•Fax — 410-597-0118.

•Regular mail — SSA Fraud Hotline, P.O. Box 17768, Baltimore, MD 21235.

Big crowd at horse show, many entries

Thanks extended to all who helped with annual Horse Celebration here

Despite heavy rain coming down with just over an hour to the 6 o'clock starting time, the trailers were still rolling into the Morgan County Fairgrounds for the annual Mountain Horse Celebration on Saturday, Aug. 13.

After a 30-minute delay, the rain subsided and the show got underway with 205 entries. The Morgan County Fair Board was surprised at the large number of entries, but the rain was badly needed and no one seemed to mind a little mud.

The crowd of spectators also grew to several hundred after the rain stopped.

Watch The Courier for show winners and photos.

The sponsors wish to express their thanks to all the groups, organizations, and individuals that contributed to the show in any way and especially to the exhibitors for their participation and the spectators that came to watch, and hope you enjoyed the show. Special thanks to the following:

McDonald's of West Liberty, Morgan County Farm Bureau for sponsoring awards, West Liberty Tourism Commission, Dr. Bill Holbrook and Dr. David Fugate for veterinary services, Gift Baskets Galore for gift packs for ladies class, All Occasion Flowers for center ring decorations and roses, Peddler Gap and 172 Fire Departments for watering ring and keeping the gate, Dalton Howard and Red Bud Florist for floral blankets for championship classes, Morgan County Fair Board members, Rifle Coal Co., Aerial Frederick (vocalist) for singing National Anthem.

Robert Wright for work on ring and grounds, Potter Funeral Home for tents, Morgan County Quarterback Club for working at the gate, Robert Adkins, Glenda Franklin (ribbons and awards coordinator), Morgan County Extension Service, Eastern Kentucky Correctional Complex, Billy Cantrell (gate keeper), Tim Holbrook, Kim Brewer, Pam Wilson and Suzette Oldfield (registration), KEEP (Kentucky Equine Education Project), Rev. Jimmy Tharp (invocation), Laken Gullett (flag horse), Morgan County Ambulance Service and Sheriff's Department.

Black Lung Assn. official convicted of scamming miners

The president of the Kentucky Black Lung Association was convicted Aug. 25 of using sick coal miners in a Medicare fraud scam.

After deliberating for four hours, a federal jury convicted association president Carolyn Sue "Susie" Davis on 13 counts of fraud and obstructing a health care investigation. Her husband, Otis Davis, 72, was convicted on the same charges. The couple live in Salyersville and were indicted in May, reports Lee Mueller of the Lexington Herald-Leader.

A third defendant, Dr. Raghu Sundaram, 62, of Montgomery, Ala., was acquitted. Prosecutors had charged the former Floyd County doctor approved bogus claims and was part of the scheme.

Sentencing for the Davises has been scheduled for Nov. 21. They each face maximum penalties of up to 10 years in prison and $250,000 in fines. The total amount of money paid to the medical company by Medicare between January 1999 and August 2003 was not revealed, but bank documents provided during the trial showed at least one $100,000 deposit.

CKBC blood drive scheduled on Sept. 8 at community center

Want a shocker? Did you know that 300 pints of blood must be donated every single day of the year in central and eastern Kentucky? That is how much blood is needed at 67 hospitals and clinics in this half of the state.

Morgan County Community wants you to know that the blood you donate here stays here, helping a fellow Kentuckian through a trauma, an accident, surgery, cancer treatment, burn recovery and more.

Central Kentucky Blood Center will hold a blood drive at Morgan County on Thursday, Sept. 8, from noon - 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center. The event is sponsored by the Morgan County Lions Club and refreshments will be provided by the West Liberty Homemakers. Save three lives at the blood drive and register to win a trip to Orlando, including air fare, hotel and passes to Universal Studios Orlando.

You do not have to be super human to donate blood – just be over 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in general good health. You can be in and out in about an hour, and you can donate every 56 days.

Help save a life. CKBC will even give you a free snack, drink and T-shirt, but more importantly, we will give you a great feeling.

Do you know what causes thunder?

One of the ingredients of a hot summer day is the late afternoon thunderstorm. Sometimes thunderstorms are violent, but usually they just provide a few rumbles of thunder and drops some rain and then the sun comes out again and the afternoon goes on. Sometimes there is no rain at all, but you hear the rumbles of thunder rolling around the mountains and echoing through the valleys. What causes thunder?

Thunder is caused by lightning. The bright light of the lightning bolt represents a great deal of energy. This energy heats the air to above 50,000 degrees F in only a few millionths of a second. The superheated air has no time to expand, so it starts out at a very high pressure. The high pressure air then expands outward into the surrounding air compressing it and causing a disturbance that propagates in all directions away from the lightning bolt. The disturbance is a shock wave for the first 10 yards, after which it becomes an ordinary sound wave, or thunder.

The obvious next question follows: What causes lightning?

Lightning originates around 15,000 to 25,000 feet above sea level when raindrops are carried upward until some of them convert to ice. For reasons that are not widely agreed upon, a cloud-to-ground lightning flash originates in this mixed water and ice region. The charge then moves downward in 50-yard sections called step leaders. It keeps moving toward the ground in these steps and produces a channel along which charge is deposited. Eventually, it encounters something on the ground that is a good connection. The circuit is complete at that time, and the charge is lowered from cloud to ground. The return stroke is a flow of charge (current), which produces a luminosity much brighter than the part that came down. This entire event usually takes less than half a second. It is this return stroke that we view as the lightning bolt.

Lightning comes from a parent cumulonimbus cloud. These thunderstorm clouds are formed wherever there is enough upward motion, instability in the vertical, and moisture to produce a deep cloud that reaches up to levels somewhat colder than freezing. These conditions are most often met in summer.

Lightning does not always strike the ground. Flashes that do not strike the surface are called cloud flashes. They may be inside a cloud, travel from one part of a cloud to another, or from cloud to air.

Lightning is one of the most dangerous threats from a thunderstorm. Just one bolt can be deadly. Cloud-to-ground lightning can kill or injure people by direct or indirect means. The lightning current can branch off to a person from a tree, fence, pole, or other tall object. It is not known if all people are killed each year by lightning are directly struck by the lightning bolt itself.

In addition, flashes may conduct their current through the ground to a person after the flash strikes a nearby tree, antenna, or other tall object. The current also may travel through power or telephone lines, or plumbing pipes to a person who is in contact with an electric appliance, telephone, or plumbing fixture.

Similarly, objects can be directly struck and this impact may result in an explosion, burn, or total destruction. Or, the damage may be indirect when the current passes through or near it.

Sometimes, current may enter a building and transfer through wires or plumbing and damage everything in its path. In urban areas, it may strike a pole or tree and the current then travels to several nearby houses and other structures and enter them through wiring or plumbing.

The best defense is to plan ahead and avoid exposure to lightning when a thunderstorm occurs. Know where safe shelter is located and leave enough time to reach safe shelter before your danger level is high. Don't be an isolated tall object, and don't be connected to anything that may be an isolated tall object.

If you can hear thunder, you are within range of being struck, either by direct or indirect means. It does not have to be raining, or you do not have to see the actual lightning bolt. You should stay inside safe shelter until 30 minutes after you hear the last rumble of thunder.

Chemical-weapons monitoring flawed, Depot employee says

An employee at the Blue Grass Army Depot, an Army chemical weapons facility in Madison County, has alleged his post failed to properly monitor deadly nerve gas for months, and took punitive action against him when he complained.

The commander (of the facility) would not comment on the allegations, but said the toxin is secure and his employees well cared for.

"In a sworn affidavit, Donald Van Winkle, who operates air-monitoring units at the Richmond facility, charged [the] monitors [used] to ensure ... VX nerve toxin [doesn't] leak were incorrectly configured, threatening the lives of employees," according to a story by Jonathan M. Katz of The Associated Press.

Lt. Cmdr. Joe Carpenter, a Pentagon spokesman, told Katz, "They're serious allegations and based on information that's received they'll be looked into."

About 520 tons of chemical warfare agents are stored at the Madison County depot. The Defense Department has slated the weapons for destruction.

Vouchers ...

call to receive help. Time and again in the past, Rogers said, addicts called the hotline only to find out they needed financial help before entering treatment.

Operation UNITE has entered into contracts with several facilities that have dedicated treatment space for the program, but voucher recipients may choose to receive help from any facility.

To qualify for a voucher, Tharp said, an applicant must:

- Verify they have lived in the Fifth District for at least six months.

- Have an income that does not exceed 60 percent of the current HUD median income guidelines for the county where they reside.

- Complete an assessment screening.

"It's no secret we have an epidemic facing our region. This is the most devastating scourge I've seen in my 25 years in Congress," Rogers said.

"Drugs are tearing families apart, ruining lives, and stretching the resources of law enforcement and social service agencies to the absolute limit," Rogers said.

The voucher program will not end the problem, but it is another tool to help people in the battle," he said.

Bids Rejected ...

last week, were: Alliance Contracting, Inc., $8,818,900; D. W. Wilburn, Inc., $8,830,000. Gold noted that the addition of any or all of the three alternate bids requested by the board — for terrazzo in the lobby, construction of an entrance road, and for installation of a waste treatment plant — gave D. W. Wilburn, Inc., the lowest overall proposal.

But Gold said, "In deciding to reject the bids, the board gave careful consideration to the impact that awarding the bid would have on the potential bonding that would be left for a second new school."

"We hope that by reducing the projected overall building costs, we will have potentially enough bonding capacity left to build the second school," Gold said.

Planners initially had estimated the cost for the new building at $135.00 per square foot. The low bids submitted reflected a cost of about $147.00 per square foot.

Gold attributed the higher-than-expected bids to climbing interest rates and increases in the cost of building materials, noting that the low bids submitted are in line with bids submitted for schools in other districts.

Kids Health ...

is the downfall of our health." A local community leader who participated in the forum suggested that the kids in Morgan County had the strongest thumbs in America because of all of the video games that are played.

As the participants stated, there are no quick fixes or one-time approaches. Undoubtedly, changes that are needed for children and youth to become healthier will have to occur on all fronts in Morgan County: home, school, and the community. None of these areas can make the necessary changes without the support or reinforcement of other players in the community. In fact, changes are most successful and sustainable when there are collective actions among all groups who are working for the same goal of improving the health of local children and youth.

It is encouraging to hear from citizens who are thinking about how to improve life for children in Morgan County. Most participants agreed with a community member who stated, "I think for there to ever be true change in the community we have to start with the young kids. We have to start this (health) education when they are young. If it is the only thing that they know, then they are more likely to make use of the information."
